

Pretty Little Liars words by Elizabeth "Dusty" Nilges

Music by YourSongmaker

Pretty little liars, so innocent and sweet
You're clever, you're cunning, your secrets discreet
But why deny the truth, let's clear the air
I've seen through your games; I know you're aware

You can deny, deny, till your last breath
But the lies linger on, like a dance with death
You think I'm a tower, standing so tall
But, it's protection, not power, after all

I need to ask, how do you sleep through the night
Does the weight of your secrets feel so light
Do you feel empowered, or is it a facade
You don't need to cower, is the truth that hard

I've let you lie, and watched you weave your tale
But deep down, I know where your heart strings sail
My daughters, my angels, why don't you see
These lies hurt more than you think they'd be

Deny, deny, but the truth will not cease
I'm right, you're wrong, let the honesty increase
I stand like a tower, not to control
But to shelter and guide, as your lives unfold

I need to ask, how do you sleep through the night
Does the weight of your secrets feel so light
Do you feel empowered, or is it a facade
You don't need to cower, is the truth that hard

With all of our loss, where silence is loud
I wrote you a poem, my feelings avowed
We've faced hard years, lost a piece of our soul
Yet lies among us, are taking their toll

No more denying, let honesty flow
In the warmth of truth, our hearts will grow
I'm not a tower, just a parent who cares
Together we'll love, and we will get there

I need to ask, how do you sleep through the night
Does the weight of your secrets feel so light

Do you feel empowered, or is it a facade

You don't need to cower, is the truth that hard
